Standard Operating Permit Conditions

Understanding Numbering in Standard Conditions

Please note that the numbering in individual Standard Conditions documents does not reflect what the numbering will be when the standard condition language is included in actual air permits. Also, within individual Standard Conditions documents, the numbering does not include the Condition number. The reference numbers within each Standard Condition document reflect references to the numbered sections within that Standard Condition.

Permits will contain the appropriate condition language from applicable Standard Conditions, but the permit numbering is not designed to match the numbering in the Standard Condition documents. These documents are designed to serve as templates that allow applicants to see specifically which requirements would apply to their activities.
